On Sunday last, the city was much surprised to notice issuing from the handsome residence of Joe Strange, of south Wright, great volumes of smoke, and at almost the same time Joe himself. For a time all was excitement but not for long. Cool heads soon got a bucket brigade started. After working for some time and the smoke seemingly not diminishing any it was decided to take the roof off. Several volunteers came forward and in a short time the roof was stacked up and the seat of fire discovered. It was the ties in the roof. After putting out the fire, quiet was once more restored. Joe had the roof all fixed up by noon, and that ($3000) house is again intact. But he was scared for a few minutes.

LAW IN ENGLAND AND AMERICA

London Writer Says Profession is Better on This Side.

I have seen something of legal practice on both sides of the Atlantic, and my opinion is that our profession would gain immensely by combining the two branches pretty much as they are combined in the United States and Canada, says a writer in the London Saturday Review. It is obvious that the solicitors would profit by such an agreement. They would have the right of audience in all courts, and the opportunity to qualify themselves for promotion to the bench.

In America the young lawyer goes into an office, where he makes his merit known by steady attention to business. There will always be two kinds of lawyers—those who stay in their offices, dealing directly with clients and attending to matters of routine, and those who advise on points of law and argue cases in court. These two orders of men are clearly distinguished in America, but they work together as partners to the great advantage of the client.

Brockton's Good Water Supply. The following is told of "Port" Hancock's cousin in Maine. This cousin had never seen the modern conveniences of our city homes, and found that in the bathroom, much to his surprise, he could get both hot and cold water from the same faucet. While out driving, "Port" showed him the reservoir which supplied his bathroom with water. "Well, if that don't beat all!" said the visitor; "gettin' hot and cold water from the same pond."—Boston Herald.

Barley as Food.
In reply to an inquiry as to the digestible qualities of barley an exchange writes: "Barley is rich in nitrogenous substances, and contains large quantities of iron and phosphoric salts. Weight for weight, both barley and rye contain quite as much nutritive material as wheat, but it is in a less digestible form, and the flour of both grains makes a compact bread which is considered difficult of digestion, says the Pittsburg Press. When cooked whole in soup for a long time it is easily digested and nutritious, and there is a breakfast food made of barley which is nutritious, easy of digestion and very palatable."
